This Month in the Bee Yard

Tim Huffman reviewed tips for this month and next month.

- October - colony growth slowing, very low chance of swarming, watch for robbing by wasps and other bees, switch any feeding to a 2 to 1 sugar syrup, lift back of hive to check weight, configure hive for winter (special attention to ventilation and moisture control)
- November - Bees will begin to cluster when temps drop to mid-50s, Varroa mites (with little brood, treatments can be highly effective), Small Hive Beetles (Beetles shut down reproduction in the winter, but can survive within the bee cluster. On warm days, the bees still will chase the beetles, so beetle traps can kill most, if not all, of the beetles over the winter.)

Program

European Foulbrood

A 10 to 15-minute video of Dr. Jaime Ellis from the Univ. of Florida discussing European and American Foulbrood was played. Afterwards, Dr. Lane Kreitlow presented a PowerPoint on European Foulbrood diagnosis and treatment options. Greg Wolgemuth shared his experience with getting a VFD (Veterinary Feed Directive) now required to purchase the antibiotic Terramycin if needed for treatment.
